

INTRODUCTION

---

Yielding, Wakeford, and McGee Architects, PC is a full service architectural firm located in Albany, Georgia. We have provided architectural services in the southeast U.S. region since 1975. In that time we have served as design team leaders for thousands of projects, with clients ranging from the private sector to local school boards, the Board of Regents, and many other state, local and federal governmental agencies. Our extensive experience, knowledge of regional conditions, focus on cost-effectiveness, and the ability to grasp quickly an understanding of the mission / vision of the client is central in our approach to each project. We believe in using sound principles of sustainable design and energy efficiency as major factors in design. We pride ourselves on being accessible to the client during each phase of a project, and attentive to the quality of construction at all times during the construction process.

Our goal has always been to make positive contributions to the built environment. To that end, we not only pursue the best possible design decisions for our clients, but we also contribute many hours of volunteer services for charitable organizations. Our record of cost sensitive design decisions and dedication to the best possible product for each client has brought us many repeat projects.

As general practitioners of our profession, we do not seek to concentrate on any one type of project, ensuring that each design solution receives a fresh and unbiased approach. In addition to traditional building design, our background includes experience in master planning, interior design and space planning, and project management. We have worked in many design and construction formats, including design-bid-build, design-build, and construction team partnering.

References and financial information for our firm are available upon request, and we are always available for detailed explanations of any of our past projects and design services.

